

Margaret Vider

Archdiocese of Brisbane

Margaret Vider is a committed Catholic who is an inspiration to people across a wide spectrum of the community. She is involved in her local Catholic Parish of Our Lady of Dolours, Mitchelton. She has a long and distinguished career in Catholic health services where her professionalism, exemplary character and dedication to the sick are held in high esteem. She has been recognized by Government in being selected to engage in health care reviews of very delicate situations.

Currently, Margaret is chair of the Centacare Board in the Archdiocese of Brisbane, which oversees the largest Centacare service in Australia. Margaret is also chair of the Archdiocesan Pastoral Council which has recently been restructured following a process overseen by an interstate professional.

Margaret teaches Religious Education in a Brisbane suburban State School where her dedication to the role attracts much admiration. Margaret is concerned about justice issues such as the plight of the homeless and other disadvantaged groups who tend to be voiceless in the community.
